

Debra Allcock Tyler

2nd edition

IT'S TOUGH AT THE TOP

The No-fibbing Guide to Leadership

dsc

directory of social change

Debra Allcock Tyler

2nd edition

IT'S TOUGH
AT THE TOP

The No-fibbing Guide to Leadership

dsc

directory of social change

Published by the Directory of Social Change (Registered Charity no. 800517 in England and Wales)

Head office: Resource for London, 352 Holloway Rd, London N7 6PA

Northern office: Suite 103, 1 Old Hall Street, Liverpool L3 9HG

Tel: 08450 77 77 07

Visit www.dsc.org.uk to find out more about our books, subscription funding websites and training events. You can also sign up for e-newsletters so that you're always the first to hear about what's new.

The publisher welcomes suggestions and comments that will help to inform and improve future versions of this and all of our titles. Please give us your feedback by emailing publications@dsc.org.uk.

It should be understood that this publication is intended for guidance only and is not a substitute for professional or legal advice. No responsibility for loss occasioned as a result of any person acting or refraining from acting can be accepted by the authors or publisher.

First published 2006

Reprinted 2007

Digital edition first published 2013

Second edition 2017

Copyright © Directory of Social Change 2006, 2017

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be stored in a retrieval system or reproduced in any form whatsoever without prior permission in writing from the publisher. This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior permission in any form of binding or cover other than that in which it is published, and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

The publisher and author have made every effort to contact copyright holders. If anyone believes that their copyright material has not been correctly acknowledged, please contact the publisher who will be pleased to rectify the omission.

The moral right of the author has been asserted in accordance with the Copyrights, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

ISBN 978 1 78482 020 6 (print edition)

ISBN 978 1 78482 021 3 (digital edition)

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Illustrations by Grizelda

Cover and text design by Kate Griffith

Typeset by Marlinzo Services, Frome

Printed and bound by Page Bros, Norwich

Dedication

For the staff and trustees at DSC – for making it less tough than it could be.

Contents

About the Directory of Social Change	vi
About the author	vii
Acknowledgements	viii
Foreword	ix
Introduction	xi
Chapter 1 What they don't tell you	1
Chapter 2 Inspiring or perspiring?	9
Chapter 3 No vision, no insight	25
Chapter 4 Gossip, grapevines and team talks	35
Chapter 5 Top teams	55
Chapter 6 Trusting trustees	73
Chapter 7 Survival isn't mandatory	97
Chapter 8 Networks and big set pieces	107
Chapter 9 Staying sane	119
Chapter 10 The gift to see us as others see us	133
Epilogue: so are you any good?	141
References	144
Recommended reading	148
Index	150

About the Directory of Social Change

The Directory of Social Change (DSC) has a vision of an independent voluntary sector at the heart of social change. The activities of independent charities, voluntary organisations and community groups are fundamental to achieve social change. We exist to help these organisations and the people who support them to achieve their goals.

We do this by:

- providing practical tools that organisations and activists need, including online and printed publications, training courses, and conferences on a huge range of topics;
- acting as a ‘concerned citizen’ in public policy debates, often on behalf of smaller charities, voluntary organisations and community groups;
- leading campaigns and stimulating debate on key policy issues that affect those groups;
- carrying out research and providing information to influence policymakers.

DSC is the leading provider of information and training for the voluntary sector and publishes an extensive range of guides and handbooks covering subjects such as fundraising, management, communication, finance and law. We have a range of subscription-based websites containing a wealth of information on funding from grant-making charities, companies and government sources. We run more than 300 training courses each year, including bespoke in-house training provided at the client’s location. DSC conferences, many of which run on an annual basis, include Management Fair, the Charity Accountants’ Conference and the Charity Law Conference. DSC’s major annual event is Charityfair, which provides low-cost training on a wide variety of subjects.

For details of all our activities, and to order publications and book courses, go to www.dsc.org.uk, call 08450 777707 or email publications@dsc.org.uk.

About the author

Debra has been the Chief Executive of the Directory of Social Change (DSC) since 2001. She is currently a Trustee of In Kind Direct, a Patron of the Charity Staff Foundation and Vice-Chair of Governors of Whiteknights Primary School. She was a member of the Charity Commission's SORP Committee and is a Fellow of the Royal Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce (FRSA). She is also a member of the Royal Institution and Liberty. She was the founder Chair of the Small Charities Coalition.

After a brief stint in the private sector Debra has spent most of her career in the charitable sector, carrying out a range of roles at all levels, including campaigning, policy development, sales, product development, media relations and training. She spent some 14 years as a voluntary Trade Union Officer, a year working with Youth at Risk – an organisation that works to rehabilitate young people who suffer severe social disadvantages – and was the first female Programme Director of the Runge Effective Leadership programme.

Debra is an internationally published author of several books. She has spent many years working with the media, doing TV, radio, newspaper, magazine and internet features and interviews. She is a regular columnist for Third Sector magazine. She delivers around 50 keynote speeches every year to the voluntary, private and public sectors on topics ranging from the relationship between the state and charities to leadership and governance, and topical issues affecting the voluntary sector.

Acknowledgements

There are many people who have informed and inspired me, not least those chief execs and senior staff whom I have spent time with either through networking or training events over the last few years. I am sorry I can't name you all and forgive me if I have missed you out. There are some in particular who I would like to specifically mention.

Jeanette Allen	Andrew Forrest	Linda McGowan
Deborah Annetts	Andy Garnett	Jan McLoughlin
Neil Betteridge	Diana Garnham	Sheridan Maguire
Lindsay Boswell	Jane Gurney	Tony Morgan
Caron Bradshaw	Andrew Hind	Alistair Mortimer
Ian Bruce	Catherine Johnstone	Maria Pemberton
Rodney Buse	Simon Kelson	Mike Phillips
William Butler	Linda Laurance	Fiona Reynolds
Dr Beverley Costa	Deborah Layde	Pat Ryan
Kevin Curley	Ian Lawson	Frank Steer
Susan Daniels	Dame Suzi Leather	Lesley Thornley
Fiona Dawe	Archie Lightfoot	Peter Wanless
Kathleen Duncan	Margaret Lloyd	Jamie Wilcox
Fiona Ellis	Ray Lock
Quentin Elston	John Low

DSC is grateful to the following people and organisations for their permission to reproduce their copyright materials.

The Society of Authors, on behalf of the George Bernard Shaw Estate, for their permission to reproduce George Bernard Shaw's material.

The quote from Andrew Marr's work is reproduced with permission of Pan Macmillan via PLSclear (copyright © Andrew Marr 2004).

'The Leader' from Sky in the Pie by Roger McGough reprinted by permission of Peters Fraser & Dunlop (www.petersfraserdunlop.com) on behalf of Roger McGough.

John Wiley and sons Limited (Books) for their permission to reproduce a quote from Richard Hackman's (ed.) book (copyright © 1990 by Jossey-Bass).

Kriss Akabusi and the Akabusi Company for their permission to use a quote from Kriss Akabusi's work.

Extract from The House at Pooh Corner by A. A. Milne. Text copyright © The Trustees of the Pooh Properties 1928. Published by Egmont UK Ltd and used with permission.

Foreword

In all the sectors effective leadership matters, but especially so in the voluntary and charitable sector. When we get it wrong it's those people we are set up to serve who suffer. This is why leadership at very senior levels can be both rewarding and terrifying all at the same time, especially when you're just starting out. But really effective leadership can change the world and people's lives for the better. The NSPCC would not be as powerful a force for good in the lives of children without the ability and achievements of a succession of committed, creative and passionate chief executives creating an atmosphere where purposeful, wonderful and willing staff and volunteers focus together on how we can best improve the lives of our nation's children.

So it matters that we get it right. Of course most of us end up learning on the job, the hard way. But knowing you're not alone helps. This book is a bit like a 'pocket' mentor. You can hear Debra's voice in your ear guiding and advising with practical, sensible, no-bull* advice. The book is littered with real-life examples of things going wrong as well as right, shared with a light and humorous touch which makes the whole business of top-level leadership seem much less tough than it sometimes feels. Go into many offices of CEOs in our sector and you will find well-thumbed copies close at hand. Its ideas have got many of us over rough ground more lightly. Perhaps it should be retitled 'In Case of Emergency Open Here'!

Enjoy the read. Apply the advice. And good luck on your leadership journey.

Peter Wanless
Chief Executive, NSPCC
Former Chief Executive, Big Lottery Fund

Introduction

People have more need for models than critics.

Attributed to Scott Simmerman, US management consultant

In the ten years since this book was published an enormous amount has changed in our sector and in our society. We've seen a change of government, the collapse of the banking system, a global economic crisis, a refugee and migrant crisis, a resurgence of terrorism and a couple of royal babies. But all of this upheaval has simply reinforced for me that the fundamental principles of leadership don't change regardless of the circumstances.

So the core messages in this book are largely the same. I've updated some of my stories and examples, refreshed some language but it is still filled with other people's ideas and solutions which I have 'borrowed' so I can share them with you.

The content of this book is still largely drawn from some of the most common issues and experiences in leadership that I have come across not only in my own personal experience but also working with other chief execs and senior staff in the sector. Most of my advice, hints and tips, ideas and experiences have been shared with me by hundreds of chief execs and their top teams over a number of years. The book still focuses on the more 'human' side of leadership – that is the relationships and structures that help us to persuade folk to follow us and our cause.

As always, when you read this book there will be things that you don't agree with or that don't square with your own experience. Give some of the ideas a try anyhow, and if they don't work, try something else. Working with voluntary sector organisations and their leaders has shown me that the model required depends on so many different factors – the size of the organisation, its age, its revenue, its cause and so on. And, of course, it is highly dependent on the personality, value set and background of you – the person leading the organisation. Think of leadership as a toolkit, full of different models, ideas and approaches, and take from the toolkit the tool that fits the situation you are currently in. When that situation changes, or if that particular tool didn't work, well, then you try another one.

For those of you who are already very experienced many of the ideas here may simply serve as a reminder of what you already know; for those of you who are new they may be things that you haven't tried yet. Either way leadership isn't static, situations and environments change so the tools you choose will also change, even though the fundamental principles don't.

If you're doing the job well you will probably find that you worry a lot about how you're doing! Good. Constantly thinking you could do better or try a different way is a great indication of how engaged you are in your leadership journey.

When sometimes I feel very unsure about why I am working in the charitable sector at all – or when I wonder if it's really worth the inevitable stress that comes with leading in the voluntary sector – the following quotes keep me going because they remind me of why it's worth it.

This is the true joy in life, the being used for a purpose recognized by yourself as a mighty one; the being thoroughly worn out before you are thrown on the scrap heap; the being a force of Nature instead of a feverish selfish little clod of ailments and grievances complaining that the world will not devote itself to making you happy. ...

I am of the opinion that my life belongs to the whole community and as I live it is my privilege – my privilege to do for it whatever I can. I want to be thoroughly used up when I die, for the harder I work, the more I love. I rejoice in life for its own sake. Life is no brief candle for me; it is a sort of splendid torch which I've got a hold of for the moment and I want to make it burn as brightly as possible before handing it on to future generations.

George Bernard Shaw, Irish playwright

This next quote is the one I read during the times I feel most beleaguered; when my confidence is low, when I am wondering if we are making the right decisions at the right time, or when it really does feel as though I am swimming upstream and the tide against me is the rest of the world! (I know that some of you reading this sometimes have those feelings too – and that I am not alone in this.)

It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs, who comes short again and again, because there is no effort without error and shortcoming; but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows great enthusiasms, the great devotions; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who neither know victory nor defeat.

Theodore Roosevelt, speech at the Sorbonne, Paris

Good luck!

1 What they don't tell you

*Upon his royal face there is no note
How dread an army hath enrouned him.*
William Shakespeare, Henry V

Outcomes

After reading this chapter you will:

- Understand the realities of an apparently powerful job title
- Have a sense of the behaviours you are likely to encounter
- Realise the importance of critical mass

The chances are that by the time you read this book you are already at the top or near the top of your organisation. So I'm not going to waste any time asking you whether you are sure you are ready for the challenge! But what I will say is that I believe that leadership is a vocation, not a profession.

You have probably now begun to realise that leadership is a choice you make about how to behave. The job title, 'director' or 'chief executive', does not confer automatic leadership power on you. All it gives you is a certain level of authority, but authority is not leadership. You have to make a conscious choice to engage in the leadership thinking and behaviour that turns a job title into a leadership role.

The job title is a burden more than a blessing

As soon as you gain a job title that implies status and prestige, there will be a number of people, both within and outside your organisation, who will perceive you only through the 'fog' of that job title. They will attribute to you motives that have nothing to do with who you are as a human being, and everything to do with how they perceive senior people.

I attended a do at the House of Commons several years ago. (Dos at the House of Commons are commonplace in the sector! You end up going to an awful lot of them.) I was in conversation with someone when a very senior and well-known chief executive of a large national charity came over. He clearly wanted to speak to the person who I was talking to and so simply cut in and completely ignored me. I wasn't particularly offended because this frequently happens when you are a woman leader in what is still essentially a man's world (being short and blonde doesn't help either!) and so you tend to ignore it.

Anyhow, my colleague was embarrassed by this and introduced me to this man by name and said that I worked for the Directory of Social Change (DSC).

He didn't recognise my name (and frankly why should he?). Looking rather irritated at having to speak to me rather than my colleague, he asked me 'Are you helping out here today?' He was clearly under the impression that I was part of the administration team. I didn't mind that either, my career began with administrative roles and I think they are massively important and underrated. So, still not being offended, I replied 'No'. To be honest, he didn't give the impression that he really wanted to talk to me so I didn't feel encouraged to open up.

My colleague then told him my job title. 'Debra is the Chief Executive.' You would be amazed at the change in his demeanour then. Suddenly I was someone of importance because I had this job title. Immediately his eyes lit up and his body language changed from dismissive to attentive. That was when I did begin to feel offended. The only thing that had influenced his desire to engage in conversation with me was when he thought of me as somebody important. As an administrator I wasn't worth the time and effort of conversation, as a chief executive I was.

This happens internally too. When I took on the leadership role at DSC my then PA, Jill Thornton, was someone who I worked alongside in a different capacity many years ago. So she knew me quite well and has seen me develop and grow over the years. When she became my PA at DSC, one of the first things she observed was that the staff found it almost impossible to see past my job title and that the person they were describing to her was not someone she recognised from her own experience.

So people will have a perception of you that is first of all based on your job title. And that perception will be highly influenced by their experiences of senior people in the past and their expectations of how you should or should not behave or act. Good leaders recognise this and take it into account when dealing with others.

You work with adults, not children: allow them to shine

One of the things I find both frustrating and amusing when observing leaders in action is how easy it is for them to forget that they employ and work with adults, not children or pupils.

We employ adults who make important decisions in their own lives, decisions that are usually more important in the wider context than those they make at work: where to live, how to educate their children, who to have relationships with, how to manage their money, who to vote for, and so on. And yet, these same people walk into work and are asked to sign a chit for a pen out of the stationery cupboard, or are not allowed to make on-the-spot decisions to help out or serve a beneficiary/service user/volunteer/customer because they have to get permission. And so often those permissions are petty, silly things that simply get in the way of getting the job done.

In your organisation everyone is important. On many days they are more important than you. In my own organisation, when we have a lot of people attending our events, the most important person is Jill Thornton (former PA, now Facilities Manager), because she has to make sure they are fed and watered and generally looked after. And she is the one who needs to make the decisions on that day about that work. She sees more of our customers than most other people in the entire organisation and she, therefore, has a bigger influence on how they perceive us and what we do than anyone else, including me.

Somehow, however, there is a two-way perception that leaders are supposed to be better, wiser, more influential and more knowledgeable than the people who they are leading. But how can they be? How can you be? The range of things that you are concerned with as you become more senior in an organisation is so wide that you cannot be expert in any of them any more. Your job is to employ the experts – and not just to advise you on what decisions you should take but to actually take the decisions about the areas in which they are expert. Your job is to surround yourself with people who know what they are doing and create an environment that helps them to shine. So many leaders behave like either teachers or parents and then get surprised and upset when their staff or volunteers behave like children or rebellious students!

The chief executive I admire the most is a guy called Tony Morgan who was one of my CEOs when I worked at the Industrial Society. He used to say that 'good leadership is about giving other people the space to show up'. In other words, letting them shine.

You need to develop a deep sense of appreciation for the efforts and aspirations of others in your organisation. The best leaders I have come across really, really do believe that they are not better than anyone else and will openly acknowledge that others are more skilled and experienced in particular areas. This is not paying lip service – it is the truth. And if it isn't the truth, if you really are appointing people into jobs that they don't do better than you, then you have to ask yourself why you aren't appointing more capable people.

And I do not buy the argument that says you can't get the quality of staff you need because of the relatively low levels of pay in the sector. There are a lot of skilled, intelligent, capable people out there who are not solely driven by the salary. If you don't believe your staff are high performers I suspect that you need to ask yourself if the question is not whether they have the right skills and experience but whether you're the sort of boss who can't let go. Your job as a leader is to remember that you pay them to be the expert so you have to let go. Be honest with yourself – is it you who is preventing them from being fabulous, even inadvertently?

You're not really human any more

The reality is that when you aspire to lead others you will largely cease to be seen as a human being with the same fears, worries, hang-ups and hopes as them. Even though you probably feel all too human and fallible, most people both want and deserve a leader who they can look up to. That doesn't mean that they will always like you. Being moaned about behind your back is actually part of the job description! But they need someone who they believe deep down, when push comes to shove, can lead the organisation in the right direction. The biggest test of your leadership ability is not what people do and say when things are going well (anyone can lead success), it's what they do and say when times are tough.

They will expect more of you in terms of how you look, what you say and how you behave. They will notice your mistakes.

They will be alert for any signs of hypocrisy. They will be generally unforgiving of the times when you are, or appear to be, hypocritical or unhelpful or obstructive. And even if they forgive, they sure as anything don't forget!

Your nerves and stress levels, if seen by others, will have a disproportionate impact on the nerves and stress levels of those around you. The more worried or stressed you are, the more worried and stressed they will be. The more calm and positive you are, the more calm and positive they will be.

They have high expectations – often unreasonable in the context of you as a human being but completely reasonable in the context of you as the guardian of the organisation and, ergo, their working lives. It means the pressures on you are exceptionally high – and you need to have the strength of character to accept it and deal with it. It's part of what you're paid for.

Nobody likes you!

So you have to develop a healthy and robust sense of self. You will be criticised, sometimes fairly and sometimes unfairly, the moment you step into a senior role. And this criticism will come at you from all angles. Richard Olivier, in his excellent book, Inspirational Leadership: Henry V and the Muse of Fire, quotes from Shakespeare's Henry V where Henry is 'walking the job' (see Chapter 4) around the camp anonymously the night before the Battle of Agincourt, listening to the troops talking and complaining about him and his leadership.

In the play, Henry then gives a monologue about how hard leadership is and how often you are blamed for all sorts of things that really aren't your fault.

Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls,
Our debts, our careful wives,
Our children and our sins, lay on the king!

Recommended reading

Anderson, James and Marilyn Ricci (eds), Society & Social Science, 1994, Open University Press

Chait, Richard P., William P. Ryan and Barbara E. Taylor, Governance as Leadership, 2005, John Wiley & Sons

Cook, Liz and Brian Rothwell, The X&Y of Leadership, 2000, The Industrial Society

Davis, Stan and Christopher Meyer, Blur: The speed of change in the connected economy, 1999, Grand Central Publishing

Eastwood, Mike, The Charity Trustees Handbook, 2010, Directory of Social Change

Forrest, Andrew and Patrick Tolfree, Leaders: The learning curve of achievement, 1992, The Industrial Society

Goleman, Daniel, Emotional Intelligence: Why it can matter more than IQ, 2005, Bantam Books

Hackman, Richard, Leading Teams: Setting the stage for great performances, 2002, Harvard Business School Press

Harris, John, The Good Management Guide for the Voluntary Sector, 2002, NCVO

Hawkins, Peter, The Wise Fool's Guide to Leadership, 2005, O-Books

Hind, Andrew, The Governance and Management of Charities, 1995, Voluntary Sector Press

Hudson, Mike, Managing Without Profit, 2017, Directory of Social Change

Hudson, Mike and Jacinta Ashworth, Building Outstanding Leadership Teams, 2014, Directory of Social Change

Johnson, Dr Spencer, Who Moved My Cheese?, 2002, Vermillion

Lawrie, Alan, Business and Strategic Planning, 2014, Directory of Social Change

Lawson, Ian, Leaders for Tomorrow's Society, 1999, The Industrial Society

Lewin, Roger and Birute Regime, The Soul at Work, 2000, Simon & Schuster

McMaster, Michael D., The Intelligence Advantage: Organizing for complexity, 1996, Butterworth-Heinemann

Maguire, Sheridan, Core Coaching, 2008, Directory of Social Change

Morris, Desmond, The Human Zoo, 1994, Vintage

- Olivier, Richard, Inspirational Leadership: Henry V and the Muse of Fire – Timeless insights from Shakespeare's greatest leader, 2003, Spiro Press
- Olivier, Richard and Nicholas Janni, Peak Performance Presentations: How to present with passion and purpose, 2004, Spiro Press
- Pinker, Stephen, How the Mind Works, 2009, W. W. Norton & Company
- Ranken, Wendy Blake, The Good Employment Guide for the Voluntary Sector, 2005, NCVO
- Robinson, David, Unconditional Leadership, 2004, Community Links
- Rothwell, Brian, Team Building (Speed Read), 2009, Directory of Social Change
- Rowntree, Derek, Manager's Book of Checklists, 2006, Pearson Education Ltd
- Smith, Edwin Percy, The Manager as a Leader (Notes for Managers), 1989, Industrial Society Press
- Turner, David, Liberating Leadership, 1998, Industrial Society Press

Index

- achieving the task 18
- action-centred leadership 17–19
- Action for Young Carers 29
- Adair, John 17
- advice from other leaders 133–40
- Age Cymru Swansea 29
- agenda for board meetings, sample 88–90
- Akabusi, Kriss 101
- all-staff meetings 46–7
- Allen, Jeanette 143
- Artangel 29
- Aurelius, Marcus 126
- away days 46

- Barkham 32
- behaviour of others 21, 52, 84–6
see also body language
- big set pieces
 - audience 110–11, 115
 - desired outcome 111–13
 - questions 116–17
 - structure of
 - presentation 113–14
 - venue 111
 - visual aids 115–16
- board of trustees
 - analogy of nannies and parents 75
 - assessing effectiveness of board 76–7
 - the best way to work with the
board 83–6
 - CEO expectations of trustees 93–4
 - CEO relationship with the
board 86–94
- board of trustees—continued
 - CEO relationship with the chair 94
 - comparison of brilliant and terrible trustees 79–82
 - difficult trustees and how to handle them 84–6
 - human side of trustees 78–82
 - make-up and constitution 76
 - minutes of meetings 90–2
 - motivations to be a trustee 77–8
 - sample agenda 88–90
 - understanding the board 73–5
- body language 21, 38, 39 see also behaviour of others; listening skills
- Bradshaw, Caron 135
- Braund, Henny 134–5
- Bridges, William 103
- Bryant, Paul ‘Bear’ 55
- building the team 19

- Carlyle, Thomas 130
- checklist of key questions for
CEOs 142
- communication
 - all-staff meetings 46–7
 - behaviour and body
language 37–9
 - confidentiality 47–8
 - consultation 49–51
 - formal processes 40–7
 - gossip 36–7
 - hidden structures in organisations 36–40
 - informal mechanisms 35–40

- communication—continued
 - listening skills 51–2
 - political journalists 37
 - power and who is perceived to have it 39–40
 - rules of effective structures 41–2
 - staff forums 44–6
 - team briefings 42–4
 - walking the job 48–9
 - with volunteers 47
- confidentiality in the workplace 47–8
- conflict management in top teams 69–71
- consultation in the workplace 49–51
- Costa, Beverley 134
- courage as a leadership quality 8
- Creative and Supportive Trust 29
- critical mass of organisation 5
- Cruse Bereavement Care 29

- Dalai Lama, 14th 130
- Dartmouth College 56–7
- Deming, W. Edwards 97
- developing the individuals 19
- distributed leadership 21–3
- dos and don'ts
 - board of trustees 95
 - communication 53
 - leadership role 8
 - leadership style 23
 - networking and big set pieces 117
 - organisational change 105
 - staying sane 131
 - top teams 72
 - vision, mission and objectives 33
- Drucker, Peter F. 37
- DSC acting in absence policy 22–3
- Early Years Scotland 28
- Edmondson, John 120, 124, 125
- effectiveness of top teams 56–7
- Ely Museum 29
- Essex and Herts Air Ambulance Trust 42
- expectations staff have of CEOs 3–4

- Field, Richard 27
- Fitzpatrick, Noel 7
- formal communication processes
 - overview 40–1
 - rules of effective structures 41–2
 - staff forums 44–6
 - team briefings 42–4
 - with volunteers 47
- Frost, Robert 9

- Gandhi, Indira 73
- Garnett, Andy 133–4
- Garnett, John 6
- Gelb, Barbara 138–9
- Gielnik, Caroline 108
- Goleman, Daniel 69
- gossip 36–7
- group dynamics
 - different leadership styles 16
 - managing the dynamics 64–7
 - organisational structure models 63–4
 - overview 62–3
 - subconscious group behaviours 67–8
- Gurney, Jane 42, 135

- Hackman, Richard 56
- Handy, Charles 98–9
- happiness questionnaire 121–3

- Harvard University 56–7
- Hay Group 56–7
- Henry V* 1, 4–5
- hidden structures in organisations 36–40
- ‘If’ (Kipling poem) 7
- in-groups 65–7
- informal communication mechanisms
 - behaviour and body language 37–9
 - gossip 36–7
 - overview 35–6
 - political journalists 37
 - power and who is perceived to have it 39–40
- International Voluntary Service 28
- job title, perception of staff 1–2, 3–4
- Johnstone, Catherine 135
- Keller, Helen 25
- Kennedy, John F. 31
- Kibble Education and Care Centre 28
- King, Martin Luther 27
- Kipling, Rudyard 7
- Knowsley Community Empowerment Network 29
- Kouzes and Posner 10
- leadership qualities 6, 8, 10–12
- leadership role see also leadership style
 - action-centred 17–19
 - advice from other leaders 133–40
 - checklist of key questions 142
 - courage 8
 - leadership role—continued
 - differences to management 9–10
 - failure and how to deal with it 6–7
 - importance of staff 2–3
 - leading by example 19–21
 - patience 6
 - qualities 10–12
 - taking criticism 4–5
 - test of success 141
 - thankless task 6
 - voluntary sector aptitude test 143
- leadership style 12, 56–7 see also leadership role
- leadership style test 12–17
- leadership teams see top teams
- Lee, Cath 140
- Lejeune, Gerry 137
- Lincoln Welcome Asylum Seeker Support Group 29
- listening skills 51–2 see also behaviour of others; body language
- Lock, Ray 137–8
- McGough, Roger 51
- McLoughlin, Jan 133
- management, differences to leadership 9–10
- management teams see top teams
- Marr, Andrew 37
- Melville, Herman 129
- Milne, A. A. 107
- minutes of board meetings 90–2
- mission 25, 31–2 see also vision
- Mitchell, Susan 103
- modelling behaviours as a good example 21
- Morgan, Tony 3
- Mortimer, Alistair 136–7
- Moses metaphor 103–5

- Moses vision 27, 28, 31
- nannies and parents analogy 75
- National Museums of Scotland 28
- networking 107–9
- Niebuhr, Reinhold 129
- nine dots problem 97, 106
- Nottingham Central Women's Aid 29
- objectives 25, 32 see also vision
- Olivier, Richard 4
- organisational change
 - best approach 101–5
 - did it work? 105
 - the need for change 97–9
 - resistance to change 99–101
 - sigmoid curve 98–9
- organisational structure
 - models 63–4
- out-groups 65–7
- Owens, Jesse 119
- patience, the need for 6
- perception of staff
 - towards CEO 3–4, 11–12, 15
 - towards job title 1–2
- PESTLE model 102–3
- Pickford, Mary 130
- policies, acting in absence 22–3
- political journalists 37
- power and who is perceived to have it 39–40
- presentations see big set pieces
- pressure of job see staying sane
- Prince, Steve 5
- public speaking see big set pieces
- qualities of good leaders 6, 8, 10–12
- questionnaires
 - board self-assessment 76–7
- questionnaires—continued
 - happiness 121–3
 - leadership style 12–17
 - setting a good example 19–20
 - top-team self-assessment 58–9
- Quillen, Robert 9
- RNIB 26
- Roosevelt, Eleanor 107, 130
- rules of effective structures for communication 41–2
- Saint-Exupéry, Antoine de 25
- Scotland's First National Park 29
- sigmoid curve 98–9
- SoundLINKS 29
- staff expectations of CEOs 3–4
- staff forums 44–6
- staying sane
 - dysfunctional
 - assumptions 124–6
 - five-stage plan for dealing with stress 129–30
 - happiness questionnaire 121–3
 - likelihood of getting stressed 121–3
 - stress level test 123–4
 - tips for keeping a sense of perspective 127–9
 - what is stress? 119–21
- Streets, Paul 133
- stress see staying sane
- succession planning 21–2
- Supervet* 7
- team briefings 42–4
- team building 19, 46–7
- Thompson-McCausland, Ben 26
- Thoreau, Henry David 49
- Thornton, Jill 2, 2–3
- Together Trust 29

- top teams
 - achieving acting and thinking corporately 68–9
 - achieving their understanding and commitment 60–1
 - conditions for success 61–2
 - distinction between responsibility, authority and accountability 70
 - effectiveness 56–7
 - group dynamics 62–8
 - managing conflicts 69–71
 - overview 7, 55–6
 - performance 57–9
 - scope and purpose 59–60
 - self-assessment
 - questionnaire 58–9
 - subconscious group behaviours 67–8
- trustees
 - CEO expectations of trustees 93–4
 - comparison of brilliant and terrible ones 79–82
 - difficult ones and how to handle them 84–6
- trustees—continued
 - human side 78–82
 - motivations 77–8
- vision
 - definition and need 25–8
 - examples in the voluntary sector 28–9
 - how to create one 29–31
 - link with mission and objectives 32–3
- Voltaire 26
- voluntary sector aptitude test for CEOs 143
- volunteers 47, 86

- walking the job 4, 43, 48–9
- Wanless, Peter 134
- Warren, Eve 108
- Westlake, Sarah 45
- Whyte, William Hollingsworth 35
- Wilcox, Jamie 139

- Young Single Homeless Project 29

So you've got the top job ... now what?

Many people find themselves in a senior leadership role without the formal training or support they may have had before.

It's Tough at the Top is a practical, no-nonsense guide to upper-level management from a respected leader in the voluntary sector.

Drawing upon her experiences as a manager, development consultant and chief executive, Debra Allcock Tyler gets to the heart of what matters in senior management, combining leadership theory and models with personal anecdotes and real-life situations.

New to this fully revised second edition:

- Completely updated material on working with trustees
- The addition of practical examples and tools
- New top tips from experienced sector leaders

No sugar-coating, no soft soap, she just tells it as it is.

Illustrations by Private Eye, The Spectator and The Sunday Times cartoonist Grizelda

'Go into many offices of CEOs in our sector and you will find well-thumbed copies close at hand. Its ideas have got many of us over rough ground more lightly. Perhaps it should be retitled "In Case of Emergency Open Here"!

Peter Wanless, Chief Executive, NSPCC
[from the Foreword]

ISBN 978-1-78482-021-3

9 781784 820213

www.dsc.org.uk